Hobart - one of Australia's most affordable cities for education

Hobart is one of Australia's most affordable cities for an education, irrespective of the school type according to exclusive research released today.

The ASG Planning for Education Index (developed in partnership with Monash University) estimates the total cost of a Government education in Hobart will be $48,241 over a 13 period for a child starting school in 2019.

This is 29.8 per cent below the national average ($68,727), and $27,360 cheaper than Brisbane, home of Australia's most expensive Government education.

School fees ($364) make up a small fraction of the estimated total cost of a Government education in Hobart each year, with transport ($509), external tuition ($565) and devices ($757) all cost more.

The Index discovered a similar result for parents considering a Catholic education for their son or daughter, with the estimated total cost of a Catholic education in Hobart ($96,290), 24.2 per cent below the national average ($127,027) and second only to Darwin ($96,061) as Australia's most affordable city for a Catholic education.

The ASG research also discovered the estimated total cost of a Catholic education in Hobart is $35,208 cheaper than Adelaide ($131,498), Australia's most expensive city for a Catholic education.

School fees ($3,396) in Hobart are easily the most expensive component of a Catholic education, well ahead of other annual expenses including excursions ($325), uniforms ($357), transport ($376) and devices ($863).

The ASG Planning for Education Index also revealed the estimated total cost of an Independent education in Hobart ($276,338) is 7.5 per cent below the national average ($298,689).

The estimated total cost of an Independent education in Hobart is $185,661 cheaper than Sydney ($461,999), Australia's most expensive capital for an Independent education.

School fees are the most expensive part of an Independent education in Hobart, costing parents approximately $11,856 per child per year, well ahead of annual external tuition ($717), devices ($1,309) and transport ($1,309) costs.

The Index is based on data sourced from a survey of 2,300 members on ancillary costs conducted by ASG and public information on school fees – The Good Schools Guide and the My School Website. The data was consolidated and analysed by Monash University.

ASG CEO Ross Higgins said irrespective of Australia's high or low inflationary environment, the cost of education has risen at more than double the rate of inflation over the past decade.

"Education costs, including tuition costs, uniforms, transport and devices are demanding a far greater share of the family budget than in the past," Mr Higgins said.

"More than ever, the costs associated with education are placing more of a burden on Australian families, who are already challenged by the rising cost of living.

"With less discretionary money to spend, it's going to be very hard to pay for education, which means parents who have saved will be in a better position in the long run.

"ASG advocates parents use a disciplined approach to saving by putting in place a dedicated savings plan, so they can financially afford to meet their children's educational goals and aspirations.

"ASG has also developed a Cost Calculator tool which may assist you looking at this data as it applies to your circumstances."

Definitions

Schools can be differentiated by their affiliation, ownership and management, and are presented as two broad categories:

- Government schools are owned and managed by State and Territory governments;
- Non-Government schools (including Catholic or Independent schools) that are owned and managed by non-government establishments. These schools have associations with religious (faith based) or secular bodies (philosophical beliefs), or are entirely independent and have values maintained by the school.
